DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities:

The title of the invention above the abstract should be removed.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over DE 19819564 in view of WO 9814715.

DE 19819564 teaches an electromechanical brake with an electric actuator (32) which generates an actuation force and acts on at least one friction member (16) in order to press the member to elicit a friction force against a rotational component (12), which is to be braked, of the brake, and a self-boosting device (18, 30) arranged between the friction member and the electrical actuator, the device serving to self-boost the actuation force generated by the electrical actuator, and having at least one wedge (18), which has a wedge surface arranged at a wedge angle (α) and supported on a corresponding counter bearing (30), wherein the electrical actuator displaces the wedge relative to the counter bearing in an actuation direction to actuate the brake. However,

DE 19819564 does not teach wherein the wedge angle is constant on a first segment of the wedge surface which is effective at the start of brake actuation and is on the second segment which follows the first segment, smaller than on the first segment. WO 9814715 teaches wherein the wedge angle is constant on a first segment of the wedge surface (586) which is effective at the start of brake actuation and is on the second segment (588) which follows the first segment, smaller than on the first segment. (Page 156, lines 5-29) It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have used the wedge surfaces of WO 9814715 in the invention of DE19819564 in order to provide a self-servo effect without allowing for the self-servo effect to become excessively large.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 8 and 9 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Magnaval et al., Dietrich et al. and Shirai et al. teach electromechanical devices with wedge surfaces.
